TORONTO THEOLOGY PROFESSOR SPEAKS FRIDAY ON FAITH & SOCIAL JUSTICE

Gregory Baum, a University of Toronto theology professor, author and lecturer of international repute, is scheduled to speak here at 7 p.m. Friday (July 26) on "The Christian Faith and Social Justice."

He will discuss a new movement which emerged in Christian churches in the late Sixties, linking Christian faith and the yearning for social justice.

Baum will focus on the foundations of this movement and its meaning to the man on the street.

Baum is editor of the Ecumenist, a theological journal circulated throughout the United States and Canada, and a member of the editorial committee of Concilium, an international theological journal published in seven languages. He is author of several books, including "Man Becoming," a book on Christian anthropology.

Baum will deliver his talk at the university's Manchester Executive Conference Center from 7 p.m. to 8:15. A 30-minute question-answer session will follow.

Admission is $5. Baum's address is the final one in the summer Spirituality and Theology lecture series sponsored by USD Continuing Education.

For more information, please call John Nunes at 260-4600, ext. 4296 or Jacqui Hones at 260-4585.
